Stochastic acceleration of cosmic rays in giant radio lobes.

Dr Stephen O'Sullivan, DCU

The target of this investigation is the acceleration of protons via the second-order Fermi process in the giant lobes of radio galaxies. Such sites are a candidate for the source of ultra-high energy cosmic rays. I will seek to confirm predictions for conditions necessary for consistency in the relevant timescales in the quasi-linear framework via numerical simulation.